Hearing a good deal of discussion year

erday on the proposition of a city park, nmissioners of the Intelligences pinion as were made of them voluntarily, and to gather the views of such public representatives as they encountered. The result shows that the project has taken a pretty firm hold on public attention and that there is a general inclination to conider the matter thoroughly. This was specially noticeable among the business nen of the city, some of the largest taxpayers, in nowise connected with any of the ropositions to sell ground to the city for the purpose, manifesting a warm interest in the matter, and expressing a hearty desire to see the movement go forward. The views of this class were substantially to the effect that the city had now reached the size which would justify, and was so located as to need an improvement of this character. Some of the most earnest advocates of a park were found among the German residents of the city, and in their travels through the different wards, our reporters found but few persons who were not inclined to favor it, provided suitable grounds could be obtained at reasonable prices. As to the best location, opinions differed considerably. purpose, manifesting a warm interest

THE ISLAND PROPOSITIONS.

The Island had the greatest number advocates and of the three sites offered by owners of land there, the Fair Grounds appeared to have the largest number of friends. It was urged in their behalf that they were already considerably improved, were easily accessible and that but a small ended they were easily accessible and that but a small ended they were easily accessible and that but a small ended they were easily accessible and that but a small expense. The price asked, $40,000, was by many persons, considered too high, however, and others, considered too high, however, and others, adapted to a Bridgeport than a Wheeling improvement. The tracts at the upper and lower ends of the Island were preferred by a good many, the former and lower ends of the Island were preferred by a good many, the former end of the city and the latter that they were susceptible of being made more and Ground property; that they were equally exempt from danger from high water and could be absolutely protected at small outlay, and that the view, surroundings and natural advantages of either, as well as the lower prices at which they were held, made them preferable to the stream of the lower prices at which they were held, made them preferable to the stream of all of them was the fact that the as the lower prices at which they were held, made them preferable to the first named site. The most provalent objection to all of them was the fact that the bridge of the Wheeling and Belmont Bridge Company was likely to be continued for many years to come as a toll bridge, although it was believed by many that in the event of a location at either end of the Island, a large proportion of visitors from the city would be ferried over in preference to using the bridge. A good many advocates of the Island were eloquent in their descriptions of what could be accomplished at either point. The rivers on either side would asford opportunities for boat houses and summer amusement on the water, and in winter would supply the means of skating rinks, while at all seasons pure air and beautiful surroundings could be supplied within the city limits, and within a few minutes walk or drive of the doors of a majority of our residents.

BRIDGE COMPANY VIEWS.

As to the views of the Suspension Bridge Company regarding the proposed improve-ment; our reporters found time to interview Mr. A. J. Clarke, one of its Directors and Mr. Joseph Lawson, Secretary of the and Mr. Joseph Lawson, Secretary of the Company. These gentlemen although not able to speak in any definite way as to the intentions of the company, expressed their belief that it would deal liberally with those who would desire to use the bridge for visiting the park, in the event that the latter was located upon the Island. It had always been the policy of the company to encourage Island sottlements. At the present tariff of tolls, tickets entitling a resident of Wheeling to cross the suspension bridge as often as he or the suspension bridge as often as he of she desired, were issued at the rate of four she desired, were issued at the rate of four dollars per annum, which if the holder crossed daily, was but little more than a half a cent each way, and family tickets entitling the holder and his family, unrestricted as to number, to cross as eften as they desired were issued to citizens of Wheeling at the rate of $7$ per annum, which figuring in the same way would amount to about two cents a day for a family. Rates to Islanders had been placed at even lower fluence. cents a day for a family. Rates to Islanders had been placed at even lower figures. Yearly tickets to single holders had been placed at $3, family tickets at $6, and family tickets entitling a family to ride, drive or walk as they preferred during the year were issued at $16. As to future reductions they could not speak. If the patronage increased they could afford it. At present it was about as much as they could do to keep up the property, pay its taxes and return an average dividend to its stockholders.

OTHER PROPOSITIONS.

OTHER PROPOSITIONS.

Besides the Island offers, there were good many other propositions made by diffauthorised to sell, and the reporter had had authorised to sell, and the reporter had had the money with him, he could have bought a half dozen parks for the city begins to the interests of the Fourth Ward, said the Peninsula was the place. He did not care for the nearness of the cemetery, the inhabitants of that enclosure being as a quiet a set of people as he knew of, and the scents that were wafted over from Fulton he did not mind any more than odors from Araby the Bleet.

Commissioners' Clerk Deliers said it ought to be located on the Woods place, back of Echo Point, near Walter's, on the National Road. There was a large tract there not available for farming purposes, and forest trees near at hand of considerable growth could be set out at small expense. There was good water in abundance, which could be used for fountains and lakes, and the place could be made a trual paradise with an inconsiderable out lav. Beside this, it was near enough for pedestrians, and could be reached in a few minutes by the Elm Grove cars, or vehicles on the pike.

Hornbrook's Park was prominently thentioned as being a finished improvement, no farther distant from the city than was usual in parks belonging to other communities, and as being reasonably accessible by either the railways or road. Kaiser William Schultz said the Hydinger property, near the corner of Forty-eighth and Jacob streets, was the place we wanted. There were about ten acres the members of City Council, but the following notes of interviews with such as were encountered, will show the drift of present sentiment in both branches.

Of the First Branch, Mr. Boring's views have already been indicated. Butte field was not sure people were ready for a park, but thought Hornbrooks offered most. Capt. Wilson ditto. W. B. Simpson did not know whether the people would consent to be taxed for a park or not, and was not sure that any of the places within the city limits were practicable, but thought the Fair Grounds most eligible of those named. Schultze wanted to know what we would do with the park when the law and order association got foll swing, and thought some of the streets had better be tackled first. As to location be was a Hydinger first, last and all the time. Schambra hadn't thought such about it, but thought the city could handle the undertaking if properly managed; and seemed to favor an Island location. Some people had charged him with being an old fogy, but he was as much in favor of reasonable improvements as anybody. Wolvington thought the park a desirable thing If it could be attained, and without having considered the matter at any length was inclined to think the Island

AMUSEMENTS.—The Pathfinders gave their initial performance last night to a tolerably good house. This troupe is considerably after the style of the Saulabury Troubadoure, and in some instances the resemblance is striking. "Scraps" was the names of the mixture presented last night. It is a history of a little pleasure excursion by water, of a party of two ladies, two gentlemen and a fifth wheel in the form of a ludicrous black African attendant. When they first appear it is at the steamboat landing, and discovering, that they have more than two hours to wair, they decide to pass the time in songs, choruses, pienicing and miscellaneous fun. The two hours and a halfof waiting covers the whole affair, and the curtain does not fall until the close. Each one of the five contributes a big armful of the merits of the entertainment. The singing and the imistence area the abit for the state of the s contributes a big armful of the merits of the entertainment. The singing and the imitations were the chief features. An incidental exhibition before the excursionits, brings in the wonderful acrobata, the "Milton Jaspers," who perform apparently impossible feats, and are received with great applause. The stage settings and appointments have been carefully perfected. The steamboat is a mechanical success. This afternoon there will be a matinee, and to-night will close the engagement.

PENDLETON-AUSTIN d Wedding at Warren, O. -Large Array of Presen

A special dispatch to the Clevelan Leader says: The marriage of Helen, eldest daughter of Harman Austin, to Mr. W. C. Pendleton, of Wheeling, W. Va., at the home of the bride, in Warren, Ohio, was the absorbing event of Warren society Thursday afternoon. The Austin family are and are well known throughout northern of President W. K. Ove three hundred invitations had been issued and the majority of them were accepted so that by two o'clock, the hour for the ceremony, the Austin mansion, on East Wickstrate, we literally immediately ceremony, the Austin mansion, on East High street, was literally jammed by the friends of the family. —Promptly at the designated time, the marriage ceremony was performed by the Rev. speople had charged him with being an old logy, but he was as much in favor of reasonable improvements as anybody. Wolvington thought the park a desirable thing if it could be attained, and without having considered the matter at any length was inclined to think the Island offered most advantages.

Of the Second Branch, Mr. Goodfellow thought a park would subserve a great public necessity; was not wedded to any particular spot, but wanted some place which the public could reach conveniently, and which was adapted to recreation and enjoyment. If the First Branch agreed with the Second in the appointment of a glott special committee, he would, with the other members, thoroughly canvass all the sites. Believed that the money necessary could be raised outside of those who usually take bonds, as he believed it would be a popular project. Everyone with whom he had talked has spoken fair Grounds offered most advantages, and Reeves was enthusiastic for Hornbrook's Park.

Wait thought if the city went into it, the stranch before its adjournment, but will probably be taken upon at the meeting of the Branch of Council, at its last meeting, appointed Messrs. A. Caldwell, F. Goodfellow and Robt. Simpson, as members of a joint special committee on the subject of a public park. The resolution failed to reach the First Branch before its adjournment, but will probably be taken upon at the meeting of the Branch on Thesday next. It is probable the committee will be completed at that time with an equally efficient representation from the First Branch, and in view of the general interest that is manifested in the matter, it is to be hoped such committee will be completed at that time with an equally efficient representation from the First Branch, and in view of the general interest that is manifested in the matter, it is to be hoped such committee will be completed at that time with an equally efficient representation from the First Branch, and in view of the general interest that is manifested
